Spring 2013

Course Description:

We explore the management of operations for service and manufacturing organizations including the strategic implications of the methods used. We consider demand forecasting, capacity planning, production planning, and system evaluation. The course makes use of quantitative models to enable a deep understanding of the issues related to logistics and operations that face all managers. We consider the international aspects of many of the models.

Most homework is done on-line and must be done by the beginning of class.

Once you have your textbook, go to this web page and click register:

You may get help on the homework from anyone, but only you should enter your work in the computer.

The “Your View of POM” assignment is to produce a one paragraph discussion of a particular problem or a broad issue in managing an operation of any kind that you find interesting or important. It should be based on your own experience. Please bring it to class the first day, if possible (late homework will be accepted for this assignment, though).
